This course examines the history of American law from the colonial period into the present. To do so we will examine case law, secondary material written by legal scholars, and cultural representations of the law over time. The course explores first how the concept and practice of law changed through such transformative events as the Revolution, the rise of a market economy, the Civil War, the rise of the large federal state, the civil rights revolution, and more. The class will also interrogate the ways in which the legal system treated people of different genders, races, classes, religions, and sexualities differently and in doing so, helped produce those categories. In other words, how has the law both reflected and created inequality over time? Finally we will explore the separations between the ways in which the law was written, understood, and lived.

Learning Outcomes
a) track the changes and continuities in the American legal system
b) identify how these changes came to pass in class discussion and written assignments
c) engage in debate on the relationship between power and the law
d) assess interpretive approaches and biases in secondary sources
e) make arguments using legal documents as primary sources
f) relate historical changes to present day legal issues.
g) demonstrate information literacy through the use of appropriate source material and original research and the ability to cite properly

The following assignments will gauge students’ success with these learning outcomes.

1) Attendance, participation, and careful reading of the assigned texts. This class will mix lecture and discussion. You will be expected to participate in discussion. If you miss more than 4 classes for any reason, you will receive no more than 75 points in this category. You will also need to actively participate to get points in this category. (150 points)

2) Weekly response papers. These should be no more than a page in length and QUOTE at least two of that week’s assigned readings. Each response should address the theme I assign for that week. Responses that fulfill the assignment will receive full credit, though comments on some responses will be your primary guide to my expectations for writing papers. The response is due on Thursday by class-time. Late responses will not be accepted. (150 points)

3) 2-3 page short paper. In this paper, you should select a case on slavery from before the Civil War on Lexis-Nexis and place it in its historical context. Use the case to make an argument about the assumptions the ruling demonstrates about slavery and the rule of law before the Civil War. This paper is designed to help you learn to use Lexis-Nexis and to use legal cases as historical documents. (100 points)

4) A midterm. The exam will have identifications/short answer questions and one essay based on the themes and readings in the first half of the course. The midterm will be on October 21. (200 points)

5) 8-10 page final paper. In this paper, you will be responsible for writing a historical brief on a recent US Supreme Court Case that you will select from several options I provide you. Your aim is to use historical research to support one side of the case. For example, you might show that the “tradition” a law was based on has no historical basis or that that the circumstances that justified that law have changed over time. We will examine sample cases in class that were influenced by historical reasoning in order to get a sense of what this should look like. Due December 13. (300 points) You will first turn in a proposal stating what case, which side, what sources, and what historical vantage point you will be using. Due November 21. (100 points)

Code of Conduct:
--Though I hope we disagree on many different issues, I expect you to treat the class, your fellow students, and me with respect at all times.
--No cell phones, no texting, no gchatting, no facebook, etc. If students cannot conduct themselves without disruption, I will disallow computers in the classroom.
--Plagiarism and other forms of academic dishonesty are unacceptable. You will be submitting papers via turnitin. For further information on academic dishonesty and the policy I will follow if I discover any problems, see: http://www.njit.edu/academics/pdf/academic-integrity-code.pdf
